

Philadelphia African American Leadership Development Forum

Powered by United Way of Greater Philadelphia and Southern New Jersey's Impact Fund

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

Created in 2017, the Philadelphia African American Leadership Development Forum (PAALDF) is an innovative program, which is sensitively designed exclusively for African American nonprofit leaders. It includes classic leadership training content and exposure to regional and national thought leaders in the nonprofit field. This highly interactive program is completely facilitated by African American presenters, panelists, and subject matter experts.

At the heart and soul of PAALDF is a commitment to provide a safe platform for honest and hard-hitting discourse about "Leading While Black." Braided into each session is a strong focus on the unique needs, perspectives, issues, opportunities and challenges of African American leaders. Throughout the program, we have built in dedicated times for program participants to reflect, connect, goal set and network, in order to reinforce the development of a community of peers.

As the program ends, participants will reflect on what they have learned and how to support ongoing professional development activities and the implementation of their post program action plans. This program is designed to:

- Build greater capacity within African American nonprofit leaders to support the development and execution of their leadership skills
- Build greater capacity among African American nonprofit leadership and organizations to better serve the African American Community
- Cultivate and align African American leadership to create communities of their peers to promote communication and information-sharing across sectors
- Deepen relationships with the broader philanthropic community and public and private sectors in an effort to become less transactional and more transformative
- Expose African American leaders to best practices and strategies for their application

The Urban League of Philadelphia partnered with the Nonprofit Executive Leadership Institute at Bryn Mawr College (NELI) to develop PAALDF. It was created in response to the findings of the study funded by United Way of Greater Philadelphia and Southern New Jersey's Impact Fund and conducted by the Philadelphia African American Leadership Forum, "How African-American-Led Organizations Differ from White-Led Organizations: Research Report on African American Nonprofit Organizations in Philadelphia."
